PREFACE.

THE archives of chief historical interest which have descended to the present Municipal Council of Dublin from its official predecessors consist of royal charters, governmental grants, books, rolls, and miscellanea.

Dublin
Municipal
archives.

The earliest of the civic muniments are coeval with the first Anglo-Norman settlement in Ireland, and they have been supplemented during successive centuries by documents concerning the affairs and rights of the city of Dublin and its government.

Anglo-
Norman
settlement.

These records are amongst the most important of the authentic materials now extant for illustrating portions of the history of Ireland and her relations with England in former times.

Little accurate information has been hitherto accessible in connection with the Dublin records. That a detailed account of them has not been published, may be ascribed to the difficulties incidental to such a work. The early documents are in mediæval Latin, antique French, and old or middle English, written in obscure and con-

<sup>1</sup> Some of those anterior to 1321 were included in "Historic and Municipal Documents of Ireland," published in 1870 in the Rolls Series, London, by the editor of the present volume. For information on the contents of the charters and grants the public had previously been mainly dependent on an account of them given in an inaccurate work published at London, in 1818, under the title of a History of the city of Dublin, by J. Warburton, Rev. J. Whitelaw and Rev. Robert Walsh. The character of the details so published may be estimated from the following observations on them, in 1823, by W. M. Mason, author of the History of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin:—

"At page 377 we have 'a synoptical table of the several charters granted to the city of Dublin.'—Such is the title our editors have been pleased to give to this document: they may call it so if they please, and perhaps they meant it to be such a thing; but by their blundering practice they have made it something very different; it is in truth a catalogue of the contents of two books, into which a variety of ancient deeds and charters have been copied; but, of these documents, many are not charters of the city; nay, the number of the city charters bear so small a proportion to the whole number mentioned, that, in page 398, where are ten instruments, there is only one that can be considered as a charter to the city of Dublin; and of this there is given the following very edifying account:—'1410, a grant was made [to the Mayor and constables of the city of Dublin, dated 30th June, and 11th Henry the Fourth.'

"In truth, this list is confused, imperfect, and useless.—Confused, because it is a jumbled account of deeds, some of which relate to the city, and some of which do not; of those which relate to the city, some are grants to them, and some are grants by them; and some other instruments there are that are not grants at all: and, indeed, the documents in the collection have no other connexion one with another, but that they happen to have been drafted into the same books:—it is imperfect, because it does not notice all, nor even the greater number, of the charters which have been granted to the city:—and it is useless, because it either gives no account of the subject matter of those charters, or such an account as can serve to no purpose, being for the most part erroneous."

Further observations on the subject will be found in the "History of the City of Dublin," 1854, vol. i., p. ix.

The dates of the regnal years have in all cases been supplemented in this calendar by equivalent Dates of documents. dates according to modern computation.

The charters and grants are written in abbreviated Latin. The first is that executed at Dublin by Henry II. in 1171-2, and of it a facsimile Charter, 1171-2. Facsimile. is prefixed to this publication. On vellum of large dimensions is the charter of 1192, from 1192. Henry's son, Prince John.<sup>1</sup> By this instrument the legal rights of members of the Dublin municipality were for the first time defined in a series of sections analogous to those in the royal char- Charters. ters to London and important towns in England.

The charter of John to Dublin in 1192, ratified 1192. in 1200 and 1215, after his accession to the crown 1200. 1215. of England, formed the bases for municipal legislation in Ireland. During a considerable period confirmations of John's charters were embodied in grants to Dublin from successive sovereigns of Grants. England. These grants, apart from the ratifi- Ratifications. cations, consisted largely of permissions for the citizens to expend portions of the rent payable by them to the crown, and licences for them to levy Licences. tolls and imposts to defray the costs of the fortification and defence of Dublin and its vicinage Defence Dublin. against the attacks of hostile Irish.

Calendar
of charters
and grants.

The royal charters and governmental grants are calendared in the present volume from the documents in the municipal archives and from contemporary enrolments. So late as the year 1887, the charters of Henry II. and John were produced in a court of law in sustainment of rights of the Municipal Corporation of Dublin.

"White Book."

The "Liber Albus," or "White Book" of Dublin, is composed of one hundred and eleven leaves of vellum. It contains transcripts of documents in abbreviated Latin, French, and old English, relative to municipal affairs, and which were copied into it at various periods from the thirteenth to the seventeenth century. Some of the leaves have been long missing. The pages of the "White Book" which contain the oldest writing are occupied by copies of grants of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, followed by documents of somewhat later date. These writings supply details illustrative of civic transactions in connection with lands, buildings, mills, and water-supplies.<sup>1</sup> Copies of wills<sup>2</sup> of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries appear in the "White Book," in connection with the law<sup>3</sup> under which the Mayor and bailiffs were empowered to ascertain the validity of bequests by citizens. In the book are also a statement, in <sup>"White Book."</sup> French,<sup>1</sup> from the common folk of the city in the fourteenth century; declarations on losses incurred by the citizens in resisting the Irish and the Scots;<sup>2</sup> ordinances of the Staple;<sup>3</sup> records of legal proceedings on rights of the city, the extent of its jurisdiction,<sup>4</sup> its claims to tolls in money, fish and ale;<sup>5</sup> and charters of religious establishments<sup>6</sup> in the vicinity of Dublin. Towards the close of the "White Book" is a record in detail of the riding of the franchises,<sup>7</sup> or perambulation of the city boundaries in 1603, of which earlier accounts will be found at pages 156 and 492. The "White Book" is ornamented with some initial letters coloured in red, blue and green. The character of the early writing in the book may be seen in the facsimile at page 79 of the present volume.<sup>8</sup>

Facsimile.

In the last century the "White Book" passed out of the custody of the Municipal Council, and its existence appears to have been forgotten. In 1829 it was sold as an anonymous manuscript at a public auction of books in Dublin, and was purchased by Sir William Betham, Ulster king-of-Betham, without any authority, bestowed upon it the title of the "Domesday Boke of Devylin Cittie." There is, however, no evidence that any ancient Dublin book<sup>1</sup> so named ever existed. Betham sold the volume for one hundred and fifty pounds to the Municipal Corporation. In their possession it has since continued. The proper title of "Liber Albus," or "White Book," by which it is referred to in the city archives, was restored to it some years since at the instance of the editor of the present volume.<sup>2</sup> In the calendar of the contents of the "White Book," here published, abstracts in English are given of the portions in Latin and French, and the entries in English are printed in full.

"Chain Book,"

The "Chain Book" is believed to have acquired its name from having been chained in the Dublin Guildhall for reference by the citizens. It is of vellum, and smaller than the "White Book." The original initial part of it appears to be a Latin calendar<sup>3</sup> for the twelve months of the year, written, probably in the first half of the fourteenth century, in black, red and blue characters. The calendar is followed by the ordinances<sup>4</sup> of the city in abbreviated Latin. After them come the laws <sup>"Chain Book."</sup> and usages<sup>1</sup> of the city in old French ; tables of customs,<sup>2</sup> copies of legal proceedings and acts in French and Latin ;<sup>3</sup> lists of prisoners and irons in Newgate ;<sup>4</sup> oaths of Mayor, Aldermen, freemen and officials.<sup>5</sup> On three pages, in English, written in an irregular style, are the directions for the pageants<sup>6</sup> on Corpus Christi day. Pageants.

From the fifteenth century to the reign of Queen Anne, memoranda and copies of documents in relation to municipal affairs were entered in the "Chain Book." These entries are generally inelegant in form, and the writers of them evinced little regard to classification or chronological sequence.<sup>7</sup> The only ornamentation in the manuscript consists of initial letters and colophons in red and blue. The style of the early writing in French<sup>8</sup> in the "Chain Book" is exhibited by Facsimile. the facsimile at page 205 of the present volume.

Several parts of the "Chain Book" are faded, obliterated and stained. Many of its leaves have long been missing. The contents of portion of one of the absent leaves have been preserved in

The contents of the "Chain Book" are, in the present volume, calendared in chronological order, and the English entries in it are here printed in full. A table is appended, indicating the present and former numerations of the existing leaves of the manuscript.<sup>1</sup>

rolls.

The documents containing records of the ordinances enacted at the assemblies of the Dublin municipality were designated rolls of memoranda, or assembly rolls. The earliest of those now known is that commencing with the year 1447. Each of the rolls is composed of several separate membranes, or sheets of vellum, varying in length from about two feet to ten inches, in width from about thirteen to nine inches, and in most cases written on both sides.

The headings, or entitlements, for the respective assemblies, the names of the Mayors and Bailiffs, and appointments of officials, are in Latin. Some of the enactments are also in Latin, but most of them are in the English of their time.

The writings, both in Latin and English, on these rolls, are much abbreviated and difficult of decipherment. The entries are in many parts obliterated, stained or fractured, and the membranes are not always in accurate chronological order. At page 283 will be found a reproduction of a small sketch which appears on the margin of an entry of the year 1454; and a facsimile of Facsimile. writing on the roll is given at page 269.

The calendar here published includes such of Calendar. the Dublin assembly rolls, from 1447 to 1558-59, as are still extant, together with a franchise roll for part of that period. In the calendar summaries in English are given of the Latin portions. The entries in old or middle English are printed in the original orthography, without abbreviations, and a glossary of obsolete words has been added. In our appendix are documents of 1483 and 1488,<sup>1</sup> correspondence of Henry VIII. and the Mayor of Dublin, and letters in relation to English traders there in 1538.

In connection with many of the historic and civic matters mentioned in this volume, important

<sup>1</sup> The contemporary record of the perambulation of the city boundaries in 1488, printed at page 492, from the original manuscript, was published, with omissions and numerous errors, in an imperfect and inaccurate volume issued in 1766, as a "History" of Dublin "by the late Walter Harris." The incorrect version of the record of 1488, and inaccurate copies from other documents printed in the publication ascribed to Harris, were reproduced, with additional errors, in the "History" by Warburton, Whitelaw and Walsh, in 1818, noticed at page vi.

additional details are extant in other sections of the Dublin archives, which will be noticed according to class and sequence.

Exceptional
of work.

It may be observed that the execution of the present undertaking involves an exceptional amount of labour, owing to the special character and recondite nature of the archives which form the subject of it. The Editor's task has, however, been lightened through the interest taken in the work by the Municipal Council, and by the aid which he has received from the Town Clerk and the City Law Agent.

Clunlith, Crinan, Tolckan, Houstmanebi, Liberties and Free Customs.

[1.] No citizen of Dublin shall plead beyond the walls of the city in any plea, except pleas of extern tenements not appertaining to the Hundred of the city.

Pleas.

[2.] Citizens are exempted from [mulets for] murder within the boundaries of the city.

Murder.

[3.] No citizen shall wage battle in the city on any appeal brought against him, but shall clear himself by the oath of forty lawful men of the city.

Duel.

Compurgation.

[4.] No man shall take lodging within the walls, by assize or billeting of marshals, against the will of the citizens.

Lodging.

[5.] The citizens are exempted from toll, lestage, passage, pontage, and all other customs throughout the entire land and dominion of John.

Imposts.

[6.] No citizen shall be amerced in money unless according to the law of the Hundred, that is to say, by forfeiture of forty shillings, so that he who is amerced shall be quit of a moiety, and shall pay the other moiety as amercement, excepting three amercements, namely, those of bread, ale and watch, which are amercements of two shillings and sixpence, one moiety of which shall be condonable, and the other to be paid as amercements.

Amercements.

[7.] The Hundred Court shall be held only once in the week.

John, Lord of Ireland, 1192. [9.] The citizens shall legally have their lands, tenures, mortgages and debts throughout John's entire land and dominion, whoever may be indebted to them.

Distrain. [10.] They may distrain their debtors by their chattels in Dublin.

Tenures within the City. [11.] In relation to the citizens' lands and tenures within the city, right shall be done according to the usage of the city.

Pleas in the City. [12.] Pleas on debts contracted in the city, and mortgages made there, shall be held in the city, according to the usage of the city.

Exaction of Tolls. [13.] If anyone within John's land or dominion should exact toll from men of Dublin, and refuse to refund it on demand, the Prevost of that city may distrain his chattels at Dublin and enforce repayment.

Foreign Traders. [14.] No foreign merchant shall buy, within the city, corn, hides, or wool, from a foreigner, but only from citizens.

Wine-taverns. [15.] No foreign merchant shall have a wine-tavern, unless on ship-board, liberty being reserved to John that, out of every ship arriving with wines in Dublin, his bailiff in his place may select two butts of wine, one before and one behind the mast, for John's use, at forty shillings, each being at the price of twenty shillings. Nothing more shall be taken by him unless with the consent of the merchant.

Sale of cloth, Foreign Merchants. [16.] No foreigner shall sell cloth in the city by retail. [17.] No foreign merchant shall tarry in the city, with his wares for sale, beyond forty days.

Distrain. [18.] No citizen of Dublin shall be distrained for debt anywhere within John's land or dominion, unless he be the debtor or surety.

Marriages. [19.] The citizens may contract marriages for themselves, their sons, daughters, and widows, without license from their lords.

Extern lands. [20.] None of their lords shall, on account of their extern lands, have custody or donation of the sons, daughters, or widows of citizens; but only the custody of their tenements which are of the lord's fee until they come of age. John, Lord of Ireland, 1192.

[21.] No [assize of] recognition shall be held in the city. Recognition.

[22.] The citizens shall have all their reasonable guilds, as the burgesses of Bristol have or had, and in the most advantageous manner. Guilds. Bristol.

[23.] No citizen shall, against his will, be compelled to replevy any man, although he dwell on his land. Bails.

The following rights are also granted by John to the citizens :—

[24.] All tenures within and without the walls, to the extent of the before-named boundaries, shall be disposed of according to their pleasure by the common consent of the citizens, in messuages and in plantings, in buildings over the water, and elsewhere in the city, to be held in free burgage, namely, by service of landgable rendered by the citizens within the walls. Tenures. City walls. Landgable.

[25.] Every citizen may, for his own advantage, build wherever he wishes on the bank [of the river], but without damage to the city or citizens. Buildings.

[26.] The citizens may have and possess all lands and vacant places within the before-named boundaries for building upon, as they may desire. Lands and vacant places.

[27.] Neither Templars nor Hospitallers shall, within the city boundaries, have more than one man or one messuage exempt from the common customs of the city. Templars and Hospitallers.

[28.] The grants here made are not to interfere with the tenures and lands of any who, by John's charters, have lands and tenures outside the walls within the aforesaid boundaries; the city of Dublin is not empowered to dispose of these lands and tenures as of others, but the holders of them are to be liable with the citizens to all the customs of the city. This applies to those holding John's charters for lands within the boundaries outside the walls, before he granted to the city of Dublin the Previous Charters from John. Customs of the City.

John, Lord of Ireland, 1192. above-named liberties and this charter. The citizens shall have all the liberties and free customs granted to them by John in the best and most advantageous mode, without impediment or molestation.—[3 Richard I.]

King John, 1200. V.—1200, Nov. 7. Upton. John, King of England Lord of Ireland: Grant<sup>1</sup> in terms similar to those in preceding charter so far as section 28 inclusive. John further grants to the citizens of Dublin a moiety of the water of Auenlith [Liffey], with its appurtenances, for fishing. He confirms all liberties, laws and free customs, which they had by his grant while he was Earl of Mortain, as amply as enjoyed by them in the best manner; and he decrees forfeiture against any who molest or disturb the citizens in contravention of his charter.—[2 John.]

King John, 1215. VI.—1215, July 3. Marlborough: King John grants<sup>2</sup> in perpetuity to his citizens of Dublin his city of Dublin, with the Prevostship and all other appurtenances, to be held by them in fee-farm, with the citizens' part of the water of Auenlith [Liffey], together with his part of the same water; with reservation of boat-fishings which he had previously given in free alms, and boat-fishings which others have, of ancient tenure; and retaining for his own use the sites of mills<sup>3</sup> on the same water. For the present grant the citizens are to pay annually to the King and his heirs, at his Exchequer in Dublin, two hundred marks, at two periods of the year, namely: one hundred marks, on the feast of St Michael, and one hundred at the following Easter. John also grants to the citizens permission to make a bridge beyond the water of Auenlith, wherever they consider may be most advantageous for them and for his city. He grants and confirms to the citizens all the liberties and free customs previously conferred upon them

XXXVIII.—1358, June 16. Westminster. Edward III.: Merchants and others of the commonalty of Dublin have represented to the King that, owing to the dangers of the harbour of the city of Dublin, no large ship laden with cargo will venture thither, and that consequently merchants have usually sold their goods on shipboard within a distance of six leagues from the city; but that this course being prohibited under the recent ordinances of the Staple,<sup>2</sup> traders have ceased to come to Dublin, and now bring their goods for sale to safe ports, thus causing loss to his Majesty and injury to the city. The King, on these representations, grants permission to ship-masters and mariners, anchoring their vessels in the sea within the port of Dublin, to make sale of goods there to any who may wish to buy from them, and he exempts vendors and purchasers from all penalties under the ordinances of the Staple<sup>2</sup> against forestalling. — [32 Edward III.]

XXXIX.—1358, July 5. Westminster. Edward III.: The King has received a petition from merchants and others of Dublin, who state that, from want of deep water in the harbour of that city; there never has been anchorage in it for large ships from abroad, laden with wine, iron, or other commodities. All such vessels, they state, have to anchor at the port of Dalkey,—a town of the Archbishop of Dublin, within six leagues from Dublin, and beyond the harbour and liberties of that city,—as there is no other place in the neighbouring parts into which great ships with cargoes can enter for safety during tempests. The merchants and others of

In consequence of the restrictions by the ordinances of the Staple, ships so laden are now brought elsewhere, and the merchants of Dublin contemplate removing with their effects to other parts. Their withdrawal will cause loss to the King and his people, and tend to the destruction of that city, which stands on the frontier near the Irish enemies, from whose attacks it and the adjacent borders have been hitherto bravely defended. The King, for his own interest, as well as for the benefit of the city and the convenience of merchants and others of those parts, in compliance with this petition, authorizes ship-masters, mariners, foreign and native merchants, coming to ports within six leagues of Dublin, to sell there wine, iron, salt and all kinds of goods to the merchants of that city and others, without incurring any of the penalties which in the ordinances of the Staple are decreed against forestallers.—[32 Edward III.]

Almaric de St. Amand, Justiciary in Ireland for Edward III.: Permission to Mayor, Bailiffs and commonalty of Dublin to continue to levy tolls for the repair and construction of the Tholsel, bridges, and other works necessary for the city, during fifteen years after the termination of the ten years named in the grant of 25th April, 1343, and with similar arrangements in relation to rendering the accounts. This grant is in recognition of services rendered by the citizens in resisting frequent attacks by Irish enemies. The tolls specified correspond with those enumerated at p. 15, with the following additions: of every crannoc of salt, one farthing; of every English cloth exceeding six ells, one penny; of every hundred

The King commands his Chancellor and Treasurer in Ireland to cause inquiry to be made without delay concerning these proceedings, and to prevent a continuance of such violation of the rights of the citizens under their charters, which have been confirmed by him and his father.—[37 Edward III.]

 justice administered to them by the Mayor and citizens, who are to hold their court in the same manner as an Earl, Baron, or Noble of Ireland may hold his court of his men, according to the law of the King's land of Ireland.
 Notwithstanding the privilege of the citizens that no foreign merchant should sell his merchandize by retail in the city, some foreign merchants, under pretext of the statute or ordinances of the Staple, lately published,—that all merchants coming to the Staple of the cities and burghs in the kingdom of England and the King's lands of Ireland and Wales, may sell their merchandize by wholesale or retail or by parcels, without impediment,—come to Dublin and, at their will, sell and buy goods by retail as freely as the merchants of that city, and thus engross
 the profits which may arise from buying and selling there, giving no aid or contribution towards the charges for the preservation and defence of the city of Dublin.
 Under an ordinance recently made that all wool, hides,
 and other goods from the King's dominions above mentioned for foreign parts are to be carried to his town of Calais, and not elsewhere, the citizens of Dublin are bound to bring their merchandize, namely, old cloth, wool, hides, and other exempted goods, which are very unlike and different from the merchandize of other lands, to the town of Calais, where they can with difficulty sell such goods for any proper value, or obtain wines, iron, salt, or other merchandize fit for Ireland; and the citizens of Dublin, having disposed of their goods at a low price at Calais, are necessitated to take a new freight to parts of England, Gasconne, or elsewhere, to obtain merchandize suitable for their country, and they have thus to incur two freights instead of one, to their great loss and manifest impoverishment. In consideration of The citizens of Dublin are authorized to bring old cloth, wool, hides, and all other wares produced in Ireland—corn only excepted when prohibited—to England, Gasconne and other places, where they may desire, as they did before the enactment of the statute and ordinances of the Staple.—[37 Edward III.]

They have represented that, owing to pestilence, incursions by Irish enemies, and divers heavy burthens in the time of the King and his progenitors, the citizens were unable to pay the rent to the Crown without imposing tallage on the commonalty. Many of the commons had consequently left Dublin, and would not return to the city, on which great loss and "manifest desolation" were thus entailed. The city walls, fortalices and towers having in divers parts become weak and ruinous, the Mayor, Bailiffs and commons were necessitated to incur heavy expenditure on them and other works requisite for defence against enemies.—[5 Henry VI.]

LXXXI.—1548, April 21. Westminster. Edward VI., with consent of the Protector, Edward, Duke of Somerset, and Council: Letters patent constituting the existing Bailiffs of the city of Dublin Sheriffs, and incorporating the city under the style of one Mayor, two Sheriffs and the commonalty and citizens of Dublin. The city is to be distinct from the county of Dublin, and shall be styled the county of the city of Dublin. The Bailiffs are to be Sheriffs. They shall be so designated, and be elected as the Bailiffs were formerly. The Sheriff of the county is not to officiate within the county of the city, except where the gibbet or gallows now stands, and there only to execute felons condemned outside the liberties of the city. The Sheriffs shall hold their courts on Tuesday, from month to month, and in the same mode as the King's other Sheriffs in Ireland. The Mayor, Sheriffs, commonalty and citizens are empowered to hold their lands and possessions, as at present, and to acquire and purchase others, to the value of one hundred marks per annum, for themselves and their successors. The King confirms to them all their former privileges, whether granted by his progenitors or enjoyed by usage or prescription. The present grant, intended to place the city in better condition for defence and resistance to enemies, is in consideration of the constant fidelity and zeal evinced there, especially of late, in the cost, labours, charges and perils incurred by the Mayor, Bailiffs, commons and citizens.—[2 Edward VI.]

Letters patent, attested at Dublin by Thomas Butler, Earl of Ossory, Deputy-General of Ireland: Grant in perpetuity to Mayor, Sheriffs, Commonalty and citizens of Dublin of an annual sum of five hundred pounds,<sup>1</sup> current money of England, to be paid, out of the fixed and casual revenues of the kingdom of Ireland, by the hands of the King's Treasurer, Vice-Treasurer, or General Receiver there, in two equal portions, one on the feast of St. Michael the Archangel, and the other at Easter.

Indigence
of Dublin
City.

The King has been informed by petition from the Mayor, Sheriffs, Commons and citizens that Dublin has been reduced to an indigent condition by its constant and loyal adherence, during many years, to the King's father and himself. His Majesty's father, by letter from Oxford,<sup>2</sup> dated 23rd February, 1643 [-4], acknowledged these services and promised, on the word of a King, that in due time they should be remembered, to the honour and advantage of the citizens. The King also bears gratefully in mind the early and important aid which the citizens rendered in promotion of his Restoration. He designs the present grant as a permanent memorial to commemorate to after ages the high estimation in which he holds the citizens' services to his father and himself, and his appreciation of the sufferings which they bravely and courageously endured in maintaining the rights of his government and of his royal Crown. The grant is made in accordance with the King's letters patent, under the royal signet, dated at the Court at Whitehall on the 14th of March, 1664-5. Original in Latin.—[17 Charles II.]

XCVI.—1671, Dec. 5. Establishment of Hospital and Charles II. 1671. Free School at Dublin.

Letters patent, attested at Dublin by John, Lord Berkeley, Lieutenant-General and General Governor of Ireland: The Mayor, Sheriffs, Commons and citizens of Dublin have petitioned the King, setting forth that several of his subjects in that city and in Ireland, being charitably affected towards such as through age, sickness, or other accidents, are reduced to poverty, or disabled to gain their living by their own labour; and piously considering also Poor and Disabled
Persons, the great benefit of the good education and instruction of youth, have proposed the erection, building and establishing of an Hospital and Free School within the liberties of the city of Dublin, and have shewn great willingness Proposed erection of Hospital
and Free
School, to contribute to so good a work, which they hope to accomplish, in case they may, by royal authority, be enabled and capacitated to purchase lands, tenements and hereditaments for the erecting and maintaining of such an Hospital and Free School, and to make good, wholesome and necessary laws for the rule and government thereof. For the furtherance and accomplishment of so good and charitable a work, by and with the advice and consent of John, Lord Berkeley, Lieutenant-General and General Governor of Ireland, and according to royal letters dated at Whitehall, 24th October, 1671, the King has granted and confirmed to the Mayor, Sheriffs, Commons and citizens of Dublin, and their successors for ever, the piece of ground on Oxmantown Green, near that city, on Oxmantown
Green, which the intended Hospital and Free School are already

“By the Lord Lieutenant and Council.

“Essex.—Whereas his Majesty, by his letters bearing date the 6th day of April, 1676, for the reasons therein expressed hath authorized and required us, the Lord Lieutenant, to cause effectual letters patents to be passed under his Majesty’s great seal here containing a grant and confirmation from his Majesty, his heirs and successors, unto the Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, commons and citizens of Dublin, for the having, receiving and taking the customs of the gates of the city of Dublin to them and their successors for ever ; and whereas his Majesty by his said letters hath declared that in the said letters patents a proviso be inserted that the profits of the said customs for the term of seven years be disposed to such publick uses, for the benefit of the said Corporation, as the Lord Lieutenant, or other Chief Governor or Governors, and Council for the time should think fit to direct and appoint:
Now we, the Lord Lieutenant and Council, in pursuance of his Majesty’s pleasure signified by his said letters, do hereby direct and appoint that, out of the profits of the said customs, the sum of one hundred pounds yearly dur-

General Governor of our kingdom of Ireland, to report to us what he should think fit to be done thereupon ; in obedience whereunto, our said Lieutenant, by his report bearing date twentieth day of March, in the year one thousand six hundred and seventy-five, signified to us his opinion that he had considered of the said petition, and did conceive it necessary for our service that we should grant our royal letters requiring our Lord Lieutenant, or other Chief Governor or Governors of Ireland for the time being, to cause effectual letters patent to be passed, under the great seal of our said kingdom of Ireland, containing our grant and confirmation unto the petitioners for the having, receivng and taking the said Customs, to them and their successors for ever, in as large and ample manner as they have been formerly granted to them by any other charters or letters patent from us and our royal predecessors, and have by them been enjoyed accordingly by virtue of the same ; and that it would be also for our service, if we should so think fit, that a proviso should be inserted in the said letters patent that the profits of the said Customs for the term of seven years should be disposed to such publick uses, for the benefit of the said Corporation, as our Lieutenant, or other Chief Governor or Governors, and Council for the time being should think fit to direct and appoint ; and whereas we were also pleased to refer the said petition and report to our right trusty and right well-beloved cousin and Councillor, Thomas, Earl of Danby, our High Treasurer of England, who fully agreed therewith : Know ye, therefore, that we, taking the premisses into our princely consideration, and being graciously pleased to place some mark of our favour upon the said city for their past loyalty and services to us and our royal predecessors, and also the better to encourage and enable them to perform the same for the future, of our special grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, by and with the advice and consent of our said right trusty and right well-beloved cousin and

Councillor, Arthur, Earl of Essex, our Lieutenant-General and General Governor of our said kingdom of Ireland, and according to the tenour of our letters under our privy signet and sign manual, bearing date at our Court at Newmarket, the 6th day of April, in the twenty-eighth year of our reign, and in the year of our Lord 1676, now inrolled in the Rolls of our High Court of Chancery in our said kingdom of Ireland, have given, granted, released, and confirmed, and by these presents, for us, our heirs and successors, do give, grant, release, and confirm to the Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, Commons and citizens of the city of Dublin, all those customs commonly called the Customs of the Gates, for such things as are or at any time hereafter shall be brought into the said city of Dublin, or suburbs thereof, there to be exposed to sale, and also for such things as are or shall be carried out of the city, together with full liberty, licence, power and authority to have, receive, collect and take the same, in as large and ample manner as the same have been granted to them or their predecessors by any other charter or letters patent from us or any of our royal predecessors, and have been by them enjoyed accordingly by virtue of the same: To have and to hold the aforesaid customs, together with their rights, members, perquisites and appurtenances thereunto belonging, to the said Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, Commons and citizens of the said city of Dublin and their successors for ever to the only use, benefit and behoof of them, the said Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, Commons, and citizens of the said city for ever, without rendering any manner of account to us, our heirs or successors, of or for the same: Provided always, and our will and pleasure is, that the profits of the said customs for the term of seven years from the date of these our letters patent, shall be disposed of to such publick uses for the benefit of the said Corporation as the Lord Lieutenant, or other Chief Governor or Governors, and Council of our said kingdom of Ireland have thought fit, or hereafter

C.—1687, Oct. 27. Dublin. James II.: All the rights and liberties of the Mayor, Sheriffs, Commons and citizens of the ancient and populous city of Dublin, the capital of the kingdom of Ireland, had been seized into the King's hands by a judgment of the Court of Exchequer. With the advice and consent of Richard Talbot, Earl of Tyrconnell, Deputy-General and General Governor of Ireland, his Majesty, by letters under Privy Seal and sign manual, dated at Windsor, 20th Sept. 1687, has ordained that the city of Dublin, with all the possessions and rights which it had at any time, and subject to the payment of the Crown rents as hitherto, shall be a body corporate and politic by the name of the Mayor, Sheriffs, Commons and citizens of Dublin, and under the following regulations :—

James II.
1687.

Richard
Talbot, Earl of Tyrconnell

Incorporation.

The Mayor, twenty-four Aldermen, a Chamberlain, and forty-eight free burgesses, to be elected annually, and to be the Common Council of the city, to consult and determine on ordinances and matters touching their state and government and regulations for markets and fairs, with power to punish, by imprisonment and fines.

Annual Elections.

The Mayor to be elected on the second Friday after Easter, and to be sworn before the Chief Governor of Ireland or the Chief Baron, or, in their absence, before the Mayor, his predecessor.

Mayor.
Oath.

A gilded sword, and a cap of maintenance are to be borne before the Mayor, in the same manner as before the Lord Mayor of London. The Mayor is authorized to wear a collar of SS, and, during his Mayoralty, he is to be styled Lord Mayor, and his wife Lady Mayoress.

Collar
of SS.
Titles.

The Mayor is to be Clerk of the Market, and to hold assize of bread, of weights and measures.

Clerk of Market.

The Mayor, six Aldermen, and Recorder, while in office, to be Justices of the Peace and gaol delivery.

Justices
of Peace.

A Deputy-Mayor, Recorder, Deputy-Recorder, Clerk and Prothonotary, Town Clerk for the city, Clerk of the Crown and Peace and Clerk of the Staple, are to be appointed.

Recorder.
Officials.

James II.
1687.
Sheriffs.

Two Sheriffs are to be nominated by the Mayor, Recorder and Common Council.

Court of Record.

A court of record is to be held on every Thursday within the city before the Mayor and Sheriffs, with power to punish by fine and imprisonment, and to amerce jurors who omit to attend.

Waifs,
Wrecks

All goods of felons, fugitives, waifs, strays, and wrecks of the sea, within the liberties and franchises of Dublin, are granted to the Mayor, Sheriffs, Commons and citizens.

Dublin is constituted a seaport for the departure, arrival and unloading of ships and boats.

Markets.

A public market is to be kept in Dublin weekly on Wednesdays and Saturdays. Ormond market in Oxmantown is to continue. A market is hereafter to be held at Lazy Hill, and to be called Roscommon market, in the place appointed by Carey Dillon, Earl of Roscommon, provided that no obstruction in the streets is caused by it.

Coroners.
Merchant
Guild.

The Mayors, Sheriffs, Commons, and citizens are to appoint four Coroners; to establish a Merchant Guild, consisting of an adequate number of merchants; and to elect annually a Mayor and two Constables of the Staple.

Oaths.

The oaths to be taken by the Mayor and all others named in this charter are to be the ancient and usual oaths.

Removal.
Mayor.

The Mayor, Recorder, and Sheriffs, as well as all members of the Common Council and officers of the city, are to be removable by order of the Chief Governor of Ireland and Privy Council. The Mayor is also to be removable by the Common Council, and the Sheriffs by the latter and the Mayor.

Recorder.
Town Clerk.

Appointments of Recorder and Town Clerk are to be subject to approval by the Chief Governor for the time being.

Parliament.

Two burgesses are to be elected to represent the city in Parliament. During the sittings of Parliament they are to attend it, at the cost and charges of the Mayor, Sheriffs, Commons and citizens.

Description of Charter. [The original charter is entirely in Latin, and extends to fifteen large sheets of parchment, some of which have been injured. The first leaf is handsomely decorated, gilt, and coloured. At head are the royal arms, the cross of St. George, and the harp of Ireland. The line "Jacobus Secundus, Dei gratia"—"James the Second, by Ornamentation. the grace of God"—is in gilt capital letters. The "J" in "Jacobus" is of large proportions, with artistic ornamentation. In combination with it, and within an oval border

Portrait of James II. of gold, is an elaborate portrait of James II. The background to the portrait is red, and the King is represented with large wig and robe of scarlet and ermine. Under the portrait, and in the right margin of the charter, is a gilt Escutcheons. escutcheon, with coronet, and charged with a lion rampant, the arms of "His Excellency, Richard, Earl of Tyrconnell, Lord Deputy," who is mentioned at the commencement of the charter. Under the escutcheon of Tyrconnell

Duke of Tyreconnell. are the arms of "the Honourable City of Dublin." Both of these escutcheons have been partially damaged. On the margins of the sheets, are depicted the arms of Aldermen and Burgesses nominated in the charter. The arms of the Aldermen are larger than those of the burgesses. All are in colours, some with gold and silver, and the name of each person appears at the foot of the escutcheon of his arms.

Facsimiles of National Mss. of Ireland. A reproduction of the first sheet of this charter was published in "Facsimiles of National Manuscripts of Ireland," Part iv., 2, Plate lxxxiv. London: 1884. #### fol. 6. 1.—GRANT BY CITIZENS OF DUBLIN, 1236.

The citizens of Dublin grant to Randulf le Hore and William Russel, their fellow-citizens, a meadow extending, in length, from the old quarry of the Oustmans to Oustmans. Kilmehānok, and, in breadth, from the King's highway Kylme-hanok. as far as the stream of the water of Auenlyf [Liffey]. Auenlyf. To be held at the yearly rent of four shillings of silver. Under common seal, and attested by the Commonalty on Common Seal of

Grant by Citizens, 1236. the sixth of the kalends of July, in the twentieth year of the reign of Henry, son of King John.<sup>1</sup> [1236.]

2.—GRANT FROM PRINCE JOHN.

John, son of the King of England, and Lord of Ireland, grants to William Dubelday the site of a mill between the gate of the church of St. Mary of Dublin and the church of St. Andrew, with so much of the water-course as pertains to the mill-site. To be held by the service of one hawk yearly.<sup>2</sup>

3.—GRANT TO WILLIAM FITZ ROBERT, 1229-30.

The citizens of Dublin grant to William FitzRobert, with the coif,<sup>3</sup> Clerk of the city, for his good and faithful service, a plot of ground at the New Gate, between the wall and the land of Henri, son and heir of Norman Clater, at the yearly rent of one pound of pepper to the Prevosts of Dublin. This grant is made on the first Monday after [Feb. 24] the feast of St. Matthias, the Apostle, in the fourteenth year of the reign of King Henry [III.], the year in which the Mayoralty and Commonalty were granted<sup>4</sup> by him to the citizens, and in their first council, with the assent of Lord Gilbert del Lyuet, Richard Muton, then Mayor, Guido of Cornwall and William Tayleburgh, then Prevosts, Radulf de Mora, Robert the [money-] changer, Edward Palmar, Philip de Duram, William de Lenne, and many others of their fellow-citizens, in the full Hundred Court, before all the Commonalty. In presence of them, and of his father, all claim to the ground is publicly renounced, by word of mouth, by Henry Clater. The Commonalty and the Hundred of Dublin, and the above-named citizens, by affixing their common seal to this grant, warrant the land to William and his heirs. [1229-30.]

7.—GRANT TO RADULF LE PORTER.

The citizens, by common counsel and consent, grant to fol. 7.
Le Porter. Radulf le Porter, and his heirs, permission at his will to Building. construct and build, with wood or stone, beyond the lane between his stone house and the ground of Hugh the Tanner, a passage through the said lane, from the gate of St. Audoen so far as the water of Auenlif [Liffey], so that he may there make a suitable gate, to be open at all proper hours, and through which a cart loaded with hides and one sack of wool may, when necessary, have passage to the water of Auenlif. For this grant Radulf and his heirs are to pay twelve pence annually for all service, exaction and demand. The citizens have also given to Radulf and his heirs ten feet of their ground, in breadth, opposite the habitation of the Friars Preachers of the Holy Saviour, Dublin, towards the west, and, in length, from the street so far as the thread of the water of Auenlif, for the annual payment of six pence, he receiving what he may from his stone house.
Radulf or his heirs are not to confer the ten feet of ground upon any religious house, nor on the Friars Preachers of the Holy Saviour, Dublin, if they should so desire. Under the common seal. Attested by Lord

18.—COMPACT BETWEEN DUBLIN AND DROGHEDA, 1252.

Agreement made on the feast of St. Michael, in the thirty-sixth year of the reign of Henry III. : The King's citizens of Dublin and his burghers of Drogheda covenant to maintain mutual peace and amity. The citizens of Dublin are to be free in the town of Drogheda and its liberties. The burghers of Drogheda, elected by the citizens of Dublin for such purpose, are to come to the council of the latter; and the citizens of Dublin, elected in like manner, are to attend the council of the burghers of Drogheda. Applications to the King, or others, for the profit and honour of Dublin or Drogheda, are to be made by the united council of the citizens and burghers; and they are to aid in resisting any who seek to trouble or molest them. If any of Dublin or Drogheda injure others of Dublin or Drogheda in foreign parts, complaint shall not be made abroad; but, on their return, the matter is to be adjusted by the council of the citizens and burghers. Debtors in the burgh of Drogheda to citizens of Dublin are to be constrained by the Prevost of the burgh to pay their debts; and a similar course is to be adopted in Dublin. Acts or ordinances by the citizens of Dublin and by the burghers of Drogheda, for the profit and honour of the city or burgh, are to be firmly observed on both sides.<sup>1</sup>

Water.

Return by Jurors.

1244.

Maurice Fitz Gerald, Justiciary of Ireland, commands the Sheriff of Dublin, without delay, by twelve free and lawful men of his county, to make inquisition, with advice of the Mayor and citizens, as to whence water can be best and most conveniently taken from its course and conducted to the King's city of Dublin, for the benefit of the city, and at the cost of the citizens, who have undertaken to pay the amount. By the same twelve men the Sheriff is to inquire whether any damage can arise by thus taking and bringing the water. The Sheriff, under his seal and the seals of the jurors, is to return the inquisition to the Justiciary, so that the damage, if any, may be repaired at the cost of the King. Any who oppose are to be suppressed by force and to be attached to appear before the Justiciary at the next Assizes. Those who resist are to be arrested and held till further mandate. Attested by the Justiciary at Dublin, on the twenty-ninth of April in the twenty-eighth year of the reign of Henry III. [1244.]

i.—The Mayor and commonalty of Dublin grant for ever to their fellow-citizen, Roger de Assebourne, the towers upon the New Gate, with buildings, cellars, easements, and all appurtenances, as well near to as upon them, with the exception of two arches in the Gate, of which others are enfeofed, and together with all the citizens' ground adjacent on the south side. They also grant to Roger a piece of ground, with buildings and appurtenances, on the south side, between the New Gate and the house which William the Clerk inhabits, and another ground lying between that which the latter held, on one side, and the city wall on the other, and extending in length from the towers as far as the tower between the land and Godmund's Gate. The towers, with their present buildings, cellars and easements, and those which Roger or his heirs may hereafter build, together with the grounds, are to be held at the annual rent of forty shillings of silver, with reservation of free entry and egress, for the safety of the city, if there should be a general war;
 but any damage so incurred is to be repaired by the city. Under common seal; attested by commonalty.

Remission
 of Rent.

ii.—The Mayor and commonalty of Dublin remit to Roger de Assebourne, during four years, the annual rent of forty shillings named in preceding grant. They undertake to build as much of the stone-work of the towers as may be requisite, and to provide for them any further security which may be desired by Roger de Assebourne. The term of four years is not to be computed until the work has been completed. Under common seal ; attested by commonalty.

liberty to lay their pipe through the land of the city as far as their house, and across the river, but without damage to the bridge. The diameter of the Friars' pipe is to be five inches; within their house, it is to be so far narrowed that its opening may be stopped by the insertion of a man's little finger; and it shall at no time be larger. If the Friars enlarge the pipe without the consent of the citizens, this grant may be revoked. The citizens undertake, without future cost or charge to the Friars, to sustain and mend the city conduit-pipe, the Friars keeping their pipe at their own expense. If the Mayor and citizens, or their successors, should molest the Friars with respect to the conduit-pipe, contrary to this agreement, the Archbishop of Dublin, by stopping the pipe where it crosses through his land, may restrain the citizens. 63.—GRANTS TO SIR RICHARD OF EXETER AND HENRY LE MARESCHAL, 1287-8.

fol. 22 b. The Mayor and commonalty granted recently to Sir Richard of Exeter, Knight, a small supply of the city water through a pipe of the diameter of a goose-quill. Water.
 His son and heir, Richard, transferred that grant to Henry le Mareschal, their well-beloved fellow-citizen. Le Mareschal.
 The Mayor and commonalty confirm this transfer to Henry, on his petition, and especially on account of its usefulness to the vicinity. The water is to be taken from the city pipe towards the corner which extends to Kilholmok<sup>1</sup> street, and to be brought at Henry's own cost to Kilholmok street.
 his house near the church of the Holy Trinity. It is Holy Trinity.
 agreed that one portion of that water may be taken from the vase of Henry for the use of the neighbours and others ; reserving to him the pipe of the abovenamed diameter. For the grant of the water to him and his heirs, he and they are to present annually to the Mayor a chaplet of roses<sup>2</sup> on the [June 24] festival of St. John the Chaplet of roses.

under it, and with the garden in the rere towards the east. The tenement lies in breadth between that which belonged to Vincent Taverner, on the north, and the stone house of Radulf de Willeby, on the south, and, with the garden, it extends from the Taverners' street, in the front, as far as the tenement which was held by Walter the Lombard, in the rere, towards the east. This grant to Robert of Bristol is in exchange for fifteen shillings of yearly rent from a tenement in the street and parish of St. Nicholas, and for a sum of money given by Robert to the city. Annual rent, seven pence half-penny, landgable to the King. Under common seal. Witnesses: John Seriaunt, Mayor; Richard de Saint Olave and John de Leycester, Bailiffs; Robert de Willeby; John Decer; Geoffroi de Morton; Robert de Notyngnam; Richard Laueles, and others. Given at Dublin, in the Guildhall, 1 July, 4 Edward II. [1311.]

65.—GRANT IN CONNECTION WITH NEW THOLSEL, 1311.

Thomas of Coventry, citizen of Dublin, grants for ever to Robert Burnel six warehouses, with their appurtenances, under the New Tholsel of Dublin, in the High street. Of these he acquired four from the Mayor and commonalty, and two from Hugh le Taylor, formerly citizen of Dublin. The six warehouses are, in breadth, between the Tholsel on the eastern side and the King's high way on the western side, and, in length, from the Tholsel, in the front, as far as the cemetery of St. Nicholas, in the rere; and all the Guildhall over the warehouses is reserved to the commonalty. The warehouses are to be held from the chief lords of the fee by the services pertaining to them. Under seal of Thomas of Coventry. Witnesses: John Seriaunt, Mayor; Richard de Saint Olave and John de Leycester, Prevosts; Robert de Willeby; John Stakepoll; William de Comptoun; John Miniues; Thomas Hunt, and others. Dublin. 26 May, 4 Edward II. [1311.]

66.—EXCHANGE OF GROUND BETWEEN DUBLIN CITY AND

fol. 23 b.

Robert de Bristol, citizen of Dublin, quits claim on Mayor and commonalty to fifteen shillings of annual rent from ground, with its appurtenances, within the walls of Dublin, in the corner near the church of St. Nicholas, on the north side, which he has by gift from John de Hamptoun, son of Thomas de Hamptoun, formerly citizen of Dublin. This quit-claim is in exchange for a tenement where the Guildhall stood in the Taverners' street, and which the Mayor and commonalty have granted to him. Under seal of Robert de Bristol. Witnesses: John le Seriaunt, Mayor; Richard de Saint Olave and John de Leycester, Bailiffs; Robert de Willeby; John le Deer; Robert de Notyngnam; Robert Woder, and others. 68.—AGREEMENT WITH MAUD DE BREE<sup>1</sup> AND JOHN DE GRAUNTSETE, 1317.

1317. On [November 23] the day of St. Clement, Pope, in Maud de Bree, De Mortoun, Grauntsete, the eleventh year of the reign of Edward II., Maud de Fischous. Bree, relict of Geoffroi de Mortoun, John de Grauntsete, Justiciary of Ireland. and his wife, Alice, agreed that the Mayor and com-Measure- monalty may have their tenement called Fischous, with-ment. out hindrance, as fully as recovered by them, before the Jurors. Justiciary of Ireland, by recognition of assise of novel disseisin; and that it may be measured, on oath of the following twelve citizens, chosen and sworn in their presence: Robert de Willeby, John le Seriaunt, John le Decer, Richard Laueles, John Bowet, Walter Keppok, Thomas Hunt, Lucas Broun, Hugh de Twyford, Hugh de Castroknoc, John de Leycester, Richard Golding, and Stephen de Mora. The jurors say, upon oath, that the tenement called Fischous was and should be of the length of fifteen feet of a man, within the walls, namely, from the wall of the tower beyond the gate towards the west, and an equal number of feet, in breadth, from the wall of the city, on the north, within the walls towards the south, and extending upwards to the top of the arch of the gate under the tower, by which gate is the entrance to the tenement under the upper rooms. Maud, John, and Alice have accepted this measurement made in their presence by the jurors. [1317.]

69.—AGREEMENT OF MAYOR AND COMMONALTY WITH JOHN DE GRAUNTSETE AND HIS WIFE, 1317.

Agreement<sup>2</sup> of Mayor and commonalty with John fol. 24 b.
de Grauntsete and Alice, his wife, tenants of stone houses on the wall of the city at the end of the bridge in Le Wall. Briggestrete. These houses had been built by the late Le Briggestrete.

70.—GRANT IN CONNEXION WITH CITY WATER-COURSE, 1320.

William le Mareschal. The Mayor and commonalty grant to William le Mareschal, their fellow-citizen, a plot of ground, and appurtenances, between the wall of the Abbey of St. Thomas the Martyr and the curtilages<sup>1</sup> of divers citizens in the street of St. Thomas. The ground extends in length from the Abbey gate so far as the city cistern of the water-course, towards the west, and thence so far as the place where the water-course crosses, and, in breadth, between the ground of Robert Rowe, from the north, and the grounds of the Canons of the same Abbey, from the south, and, in length, so far as the small cross which stands in the raised way towards Kylmaynan, together with the fosse towards the north near the gate at the Barrs. Permission is given to Le Mareschal to conduct and discharge at his will the overflow water through the fosse. He is to hold the ground by service of well and efficiently conducting and sustaining at his cost and labour the common city water-course from the last place at which water is brought towards the city so far as the city cistern, which is near the abovenamed Abbey. Reservation to Mayor and commonalty of right of distraint and re-occupation, in event of temporary or continuous non-performance of the stipulated service. Dublin. 12 September, 14 Edward II. [1316-18].

Dublin Statement<sup>1</sup> of grievances under which the common folk Grievances, of Dublin suffered in consequence of the inefficient [1316-18.] government of city rulers, as well as non-observance of the city usages, and for which remedies were sought and granted as follow :

Petition For the honour of the King, and the safety and main-to Mayor, tenance of the city, the common folk pray the Mayor, Bailiffs, and Bailiffs and commonalty to accept and carry out the and following recommendations, and to quash such of the common- proposals as may be deemed inexpedient :

Muster. Under penalty of grievous amercement, at least one man Public should come to muster from every house at the tolling of bell. the public bell by day or night, while the land is troubled Scotch by the Scotch enemies, and by the hostile Irish, who enemies, daily threaten to burn the suburb and to do all possible Hostile damage to the city.

The city rent and the issues of the Prevostship to be <sup>Prevost-ship.</sup> punctually collected, and any surplus of tallages and <sup>Tallages.</sup> fees to be applied to the public works and other matters <sup>City Works.</sup> requisite for the city. Hitherto the common folk have been heavily pressed by the city rent, commonly in arrear, <sup>City Rent.</sup> and by unreasonable taxes which interfered with their <sup>Taxes.</sup> trade and obliged them to close their warehouses.

Tallages to be levied according to the returns made by <sup>Tallages.</sup> the citizens on their own oaths or those of their neighbours.

Tenants of the Archbishop resident within the city <sup>Archbishop's
Tenants.</sup> franchise to be taxed rateably with citizens.

Tallages and imposts to be collected under supervision <sup>Tallages.
Imposts.
Accounts.</sup> of four or six good men duly sworn, and accounts to be rendered of receipts and payments before the commonalty or their auditors.

None to be admitted to the franchise of the city <sup>City
Franchise.</sup> except with the assent of all the commonalty, or at least of the twenty-four Jurats, and in consideration of liberal <sup>Jurats.</sup> payment.

Inquests of offices in the four quarters of the city to <sup>Inquests of offices.</sup> be taken before the Mayor and bailiffs at least twice annually, and in relation to the city rents and dues concealed or embezzled.

Heavy amercements to be levied on citizens within the franchise who contrary to the charter carry on elsewhere actions which should be tried before the Mayor and <sup>Actions.</sup> Bailiffs in the city court. Such amercements to be ex- <sup>City Court.</sup> pended on the city works.

A fine of two shillings to be levied on every man who when summoned by the sergeant does not come to the Assembly or elsewhere to the Mayor on business for the <sup>Assembly.
Mayor.</sup> commonalty, and who cannot allege a reasonable excuse. The amounts to be accounted for by the Bailiffs and to <sup>Bailiffs.</sup> be charged to them.

The expenses of the watch to be contributed to both by <sup>Watch.</sup> rich and poor, and forfeitures to be levied without respect to any, especially in time of war.

Cargoes, Monopoly.

The purchase of any ship's cargo not to be monopolized by the combination of two or three persons, but left open to all merchants within the franchise.

Merchandize not to be bought by citizens, unless in the <sup>fol. 41 b.</sup> markets, nor until after it has been warehoused.

Assize of Bread and Ale.

The assize of bread and ale to be more strictly kept, the assay to be made more frequently than heretofore, and transgressors to be speedily punished as in former times.

Private Purchases.

Severe amercements and forfeitures of goods to be imposed on those of the franchise who privately make Foreigners.

purchases for the use of foreigners.

Forfeiture.

The goods to be forfeited of those who privately traffic with merchandize of foreigners who are not of the franchise and do not pay taxes.

Regraters.

More severe punishments than hitherto to be inflicted on regraters,<sup>1</sup> who purchase fish and other victuals coming to the city and sell them in small parcels privately, thus greatly raising prices on the people.

Recovery
of City Debts.

Proceedings by Exchequer process to be taken for the recovery of the numerous debts due to the city from lands and rents of living and deceased persons.

Election of Mayor.

At the election of the Mayor, on Michaelmas-day, every <sup>fol. 42.</sup> citizen then resident to attend, under penalty of one hundred shillings, unless he can prove reasonable cause for absence.<sup>2</sup> Those who on election refuse to serve as Mayor or Bailiffs to be expelled from the commonalty and their houses to be prostrated. No Mayor nor Bailiff to be elected except by the commonalty on Michaelmas-day.

Penalties.

In the four quarters of the city on Wednesdays and Thursdays weekly, after dinner, one man at least shall come from each house for public works. Meanwhile all the shops to be closed, and those who during that time sell goods contrary to this order to be fined, and the amount applied to the public works of the city.

Public works.

Application to be made to the King's court and his officials, to ordain that victuals or other goods be not taken by force in the city except for the use of his Majesty and his chief justiciary, and only by the marshals or persons who are known, and under supervision of a sergeant of the city appointed by the Mayor. To the damage of the citizens, the common people of the poor class, apprehensive of seizures, fear at present to bring their goods to the city for sale.

Staple.,
1326.

[i].—The Staple of the merchants and merchandizes of England, Ireland, and Wales, namely, of wools, hides, sheep-skins, and tin, is to be held in the following places only: In England, at Newcastle-on-Tyne, York, Norwich, London, Winchester, Exeter, and Bristol ; in Ireland, at Dublin, Drogheda, and Cork ; in Wales, at Salisbury, Caermarthen, and Cardiff ; for the tin of Cornwall : at Lostwithiel and Truro ; and, for the tin of Devonshire : at Ashburton. Aliens may in those places, and not elsewhere in England, Ireland, or Wales, freely buy and obtain wool, hides, skins, and other merchandize ; and tin at Ashburton, Lostwithiel and Truro, and nowhere else. After purchase of merchandize, payment of the customs, and receipt of letters sealed with the seal of the coket, they may transport the goods to such land as

The merchants of England, Ireland and Wales, who may desire to convey wool, hides, skins, or tin from the Staples to sell elsewhere, are not to remove them from the Staples, or out of the King's control until they have been, during fifteen days, on sale at some of the Staples. After that time they may proceed with the merchandize wherever they wish, without making Staple elsewhere than at the places aforesaid. fol. 43.

Sale at Staples.

[iii.]—All persons of England, Ireland and Wales may sell and buy wool and all other merchandize in whatever place they may wish in those lands; provided that the sale be not to aliens except at the Staple; and that wool, hides, skins, and tin be not carried from any part of the said lands by aliens or denizens, except from the Staples.

[iv.]—Merchants of the King's dominions are not to conspire or confederate to reduce the price of wool or other merchandize, or to delay foreign merchants in the purchase or sale of their goods. Those who may be attainted of such offences shall be grievously punished according to the order of the King and his Council. Every one desiring to sue for such punishment shall be under the King's protection; and the suit shall be held solely before his Chief Justices or others assigned by him. In these matters, the merchants and people of Gascogne and of the Duchy of Guienne, in allegiance to the King and his son, shall be regarded as denizens and not as aliens.

[v.]—Merchants are to be governed by the law merchant in all affairs, connected with merchandize, transacted at the places of the Staple.

[vi.]—Neither men nor women of burghs or cities, nor the commonalty of burghs or cities, in England, Ireland, or Wales, are, after next Christmas, to use cloth of their own buying, if it be not made in England, Ireland, or Wales; for so doing they shall be liable to grievous forfeiture and punishment as the King by his Council may ordain. It is to be known that all people shall be understood as of the commonalty in this case, except the King and the Queen, Earls and Barons, Knights and Ladies, and their legitimate children, Archbishops, Bishops, and other persons of Holy Church, and laymen who can spend by the year of their rent to the amount of forty pounds sterling. This is to stand so long as it may please the King by his Council to continue the ordinance and prohibition.

The messuage and lands claimed are stated to be within the precinct of the city liberties. Under these charters, the Mayor and commonalty assert the right of the citizens to have cases tried in their own court, and to be exempt from pleading elsewhere, unless in pleas connected with extern tenements. To the objection that the citizens would thus be both parties and judges, the Mayor and citizens reply that the law so permits, and that similar rights are possessed by the lords of Trim, Wexford, Kilkenny, Kildare, and other liberties. The justiciary, having held inquiry by oath of good and lawful men, annulled acts prejudicial to the rights of the city, and by writ dated 15th Feb., 1300-1301,<sup>5</sup> directed that the citizens should have and enjoy all their liberties, notwithstanding any encroachments attempted upon them. Bouet and the others plead that they are citizens of Dublin, and proffer in evidence the article<sup>2</sup> of the charter of John, as inspected<sup>3</sup> and amplified by his present Majesty, under the great seal of England, containing a prohibition against ministers of the King, and others, who, under pretext of their offices, would appropriate goods or victuals of the citizens against their wills. The defendants allege that the marshal and sergeant sought by force and without payment to take bread, ale, and other victuals requisite for the household of the lieutenant, and that they, as citizens under the charter refused so to deliver their goods, as they wished to maintain the royal grants and confirmations unimpaired. They place themselves at the discretion of the court, and pray to have the benefit of the charter. Unless upon default of the Bailiffs no other coroner is entitled to interfere within the city boundaries. By writ at Cowyk, 2 August, 1324,<sup>2</sup> under the great seal of England, Edward II. notifies to his justiciary in Ireland, or his deputy there, that the Mayor and commonalty of Dublin have represented to him that under charters from his progenitors they hold the city of Dublin and its liberties within boundaries specified in those instruments; that members of religious orders and others have acquired, in fee, lands, tenements and rents within the city boundaries since the promulgation of the Statute of Mortmain,<sup>3</sup> and have without royal license encroached on the citizens, to their great prejudice, detriment and damage. The King desires to be fully informed as to the grounds for these complaints, commands inquisition to be made on them, and the result to be certified to him with the seals of the justiciary and of the jurors. fol. 70 b.

Under this writ the Mayor and commonalty of Dublin complain that the prior of the church of the Holy Trinity, Dublin, and the abbot of the house there of St. Thomas, the Martyr, have acquired and usurped lands and tenements within the city and its boundaries. Jurors are duly impanelled, and, with the object of giving a verdict in the most secure form, they perambulate the city and declare its boundaries<sup>4</sup> to be as follow: On the eastern

A jury having been impanelled, Geoffrey Craddock appeared, but Adam absented himself. Geoffrey pleaded that he was not bound to answer there at the suit of the King, because his Majesty, for the good and laudable services of William Boydif, Mayor, John Callan and William Walshe, Bailiffs, pardoned them and the entire commonalty for all offences against the peace up to the first of November last. In evidence he proffers the King's letters patent<sup>3</sup> of the pardon, as attested by Antony de Lucy, the justiciary, on the first of November, 1332. Pleas, 1332.
De Lucy.

i.—Writ from Edward III., at Odiham, 2 November, 1331,<sup>5</sup> under great seal of England, to his justiciary in Ireland: The Mayor and commonalty of Dublin have, by petition to the King and council in Parliament, alleged that they have been aggrieved through inquests held in that city in relation to complaints of citizens against persons connected with the justiciary. These inquests have been taken by strangers, often by members of the justiciary's household, and not by men of the city, to the grievous damage and prejudice of the Mayor and commonalty, and for this they pray a remedy. ii.—Writ from Edward III., at Odiham, 2 November, 1331, under great seal of England, to his justiciary in Ireland: The Mayor and commonalty of Dublin have, by petition to the King and council in Parliament, represented that many of his Majesty's officials in Ireland, under pretext of their offices, frequently within the city take possession of conveyances, horses and carts, and use them in various places for their convenience; that this deters many persons from bringing victuals, goods and merchandize to the city, which is thus much impoverished and the crown customs there are diminished.

i.—Assize of recognition between Roger de Assheborne, Mayor, and the commonalty of Dublin and the Prior of the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in Ireland: The Prior complains that he Mayor and commonalty disseised him of land near the water of Avenelif [Liffey] Water of Avenelif, forty feet in length and four feet in breadth, with the appurtenances, on the south side of that water; also of land forty feet in length and three feet in breadth, with the appurtenances, on its north side.

The Mayor and commonalty plead that this assize Assize. should not be taken, because, under their charter, it is Charter. provided that no assize of recognition shall be made in the city of Dublin, and that, in relation to lands and tenures within the town, justice is to be administered according to the usages of the city; that these and other rights were granted with reservation of the tenures and lands Tenures. The Mayor and commonalty, in support of their statement, produce the charter. They aver that Charter. the land above mentioned is of the liberty of the city, that they ought not to answer in relation to it except within the city, and that consequently the assize ought not to be taken.

The Prior alleges that the Hospital of Kylmaynan was Hospital of Kylmaynan. enfeoffed of the before-mentioned free tenement by Henry II., before the citizens of Dublin were made free Henry II. by the charter which they have produced. The Prior proffers the charter of Henry II. in evidence of this, and Charter. says the assize for which he prays ought to be taken.

The Mayor and commonalty declined the assize, but it was granted by the justices. The jurors find that the Verdict. Mayor and commonalty disseised the Prior. They say that Richard Strongbow<sup>2</sup> formerly enfeoffed the Prior Strongbow. and hospital of Kylmaynan of all the land of Kil- Kilmaynan. maynan, with the appurtenances; that subsequently Proceedings by David de Callan, Mayor, and the commonalty of Dublin, before Stephen, Bishop of Meath, Justiciary of Ireland, 1282-3, in relation to a felon, who, by authority of the Abbot of St. Mary's Abbey, had been arrested and incarcerated in the prison of that house for upwards of eight days previous to his transfer to the King's prison. The Abbot avers that by royal charters, as well as by an instrument under the municipal seal of Dublin, the Abbey is not within the civic jurisdiction. The court gives judgment in favour of the Abbot, decrees a fine against the Mayor and commonalty for false claim, and orders the liberty of the city to be taken into the King's hands. Edmund Berford and William Petit, pleaders, with others, were present on behalf of the Abbot and Canons. After close scrutiny, the seal in red wax appeared to have been imperfectly attached to the document; the part of the seal which bears a castle was inverted, but the other side, bearing a ship, was duly placed. It was suspected that the seal had been removed from an old grant and attached to this document; wool or cotton was found conjoined with the wax, and the impression and circumscription were partly indistinct. The Abbot and Canons consequently doubted that the document should be produced in court. Seriaunt, Mayor. Seal.

1447.—“That no maner man that will be taken for an Englishman, shall have no beard above his mouth, that is to say, that he have no haire upon his upper lippe, so that the said lippe be once at least shaven every fortnight, or of equall growth with the neather lippe. And if any man be found amongst the English contrary hereunto, that then it shall be lawful to every man to take them and their goods as Irish enemies, and to ransome them as Irish enemies.”

1465.—“That every Irishman that dwells betwixt or amongst Englishmen in the county of Dublin, Myeth [Meath], Uriell [Louth], and Kildare, shall goe like to one Englishman in apparell and shaving of his beard above the mouth.”

—Statutes enacted in Ireland, 25 Henry VI., 5 Edward IV.

<sup>2</sup> This is followed by a heading in relation to Easter assembly, 1458, but no acts in connection with it, or with the ensuing Midsummer assembly, have been recorded on the Roll. An agreement executed under the authority of the latter assembly, as noticed at p. 171, is extant in the “White Book.”

The Mayor; Nicholas Umfre, chamberlain; Michael Pentenie, treasurer; John Shelton, Thomas Rogers, Robert Golding, Nicholas Pentenie, Richard Barnewall, Richard Coylloke, James Dartas, Patrick Maghre and Patrick Colly were elected to audit the accounts of Robert Usher 1554. and Walter Rocheford, late Sheriffs, and wardens of St. George, on Tuesday after 1 November.

[1.] Whear[as] it pleasit the masters, citizens and comens in assemble holden, Mr. Mighell Pentenie being Maior, to constitut, ordeyn and as a lawe make that no brother of the Trinite Yeld to take aprentis; but, at the sealing of the indentors made betwixe them, the father or frends of the said prentis, or the said master so taking the said prentis, to pay to the cittie v.s. viii.d., Irishe, as a mayntenance of the tresorie of the said cittie. And Craftsmen. eny craftisman taking aprentis, the father or frends of the said prentis, or the said craftisman so taking the prentis, to pay ii.s. Whiche lawe and ordinance we, in our present assemble holden the day and year aforesaid, persevid that at leynthe the sam would be bothe commodious and profitable to the said cittie if the sam be duly paied. Yet, lest som persons would be moved rather to omitt the payment of the forsaid som at the sealing of any suche indentors then to tend ther dute unto the said cittie, we have therfore orderid and establishid by this assemble that if any brother of the said Trinite Yeld, or any other craftisman dwelling within the cittie or franchises of the sam, that take any prentis and do not entyr his name within a twelmounth after to the Clerke of the Tolsell, and pay therfor iiiii.d., that then he or they so taking the sam prentes or prentesis to forfait to the use of the cittie xl.s., tociens quociens, and yet the said prentis notwithstanding to enjoy his fredome.

[2.] Hit is also agreid by this present assemble that Haggards. thos that have any haggardes within the cittie or franchises of the sam, and thos that have corne in gernerers, shall not Corn. Garners. Market. fro hensforthe by no kynd of corne in the market of the said cittie unles they bring or cause to be brought peke for peke as long as they have anie [in ther] gernerers, one payn of forfeetur of xx.s., tociens quociens; the sam to be levied to the use of the cittie.

[3.] Hit is further agreid by this present assembly that two of the twenty-four shall fro hensforthe wayt <sup>1554.</sup> upon Mr. Maior for the tym being wykly, suche as the <sup>Mayor.</sup> said Mr. Maior shall appoynt, taking them in order; and they that refus so to wayt upon Mr. Maiyr, he sending them warnyng, to forfait, tociens quociens, xiii.s. iiiii.d. to the said Maior.

[4.] Whear[as] certeyn of the citizens of this cittie, and fremen sworne, do sondry and often refus and gywe over ther said fredomis and libertes, meanyng partly therby <sup>Franchise.</sup> to trouble and disquiet others ther neyborgs in forren courtes and places, not only to the hynderaunce of the citizens of the said cittie that would be in quyet and brotherly lovve, but also to the great reproche of that noble liberte. Wherefore, it is agreid and orderid by this present assemble that if any freman of the said cittie, or brother of the Trinite Yeld, do fro hensforthe refus, <sup>Trinity</sup> attempte or gywe ower his freedom as brethere, whiche <sup>Gaill.</sup> he or they have by the said cittie, to pay a fyn of fywe pounds to the use of the said cittie; provided that this lawe be not prejudiciall to the lawes made of olde tym for the eleccion of Mayr and Shyrrives.

[5.] Hit is agreid that if the Maire or Shyrrives of <sup>Mayor and</sup> the Bolring for the tym being fynd any baudre within <sup>Sheriffs of</sup> any house within the cittie or subbarbes, the owner of <sup>Bull-ring.</sup> the house to be punishit at the discreccion of Mr. Maire of the cittie for the tym being.

[6.] Hit is further agreid that Thomas Fitz Symon, <sup>Fitz Symon.</sup> son to Sir James Fitz Symon, late of Dublin, Alderman, and now being at the universite at Oxford at stude to <sup>Oxford.</sup> acquir lernyng, shall be the custos of Seynt Stewins fro <sup>St.</sup>

 Reinclan, now called the barfote, and so estward uppon Reinclan.
 the Strone on the south side, as fer as a man might ride, Strand.
 and keste a spere in to the see; and then a yeman named Spear cast into sea.
 William Walsh rode into the watyr and keste a spere into the see at lowe watyr as far as he moghte, and so fer extendeth the fraunches of the seid cittie estward in both the sides of the watyr. And then they rydde bakward till thei came to the blak stone be Este Myrrionge Merrion.
 and left Mirryonge on the righte hand, and ridde over a meare westward till thei came to Our Lady well, and so Well.
 straight over the said mer tyll they came by the gate of Smothis courte, and so about the greene and over the Smothis court.
 ford of Danabrooke, and lefte the towne and the church Donny-brook.
 on the lyft hand, and soe forth through the hy wey till they came to Kylmagergan by west Danabrooke and by Kylmager-gan.
 the hy wey is side, and so forth the streyght wey till thei came to St. Kevynes gate, and from that northward St. Kevin's gate.
 unto the lane that the cros of stone ys in: and be cause Stone cross.
 the dyche of that lane was faste, they brake a shard and put men over the dyche, and went throw the lane to the hy way be este Seynt Pulchris, and so left Seynt Pulcrys St.
Sepulchre.
 and all St. Patrikkes close over the lyfte hand till they came St. Patrick's close.
 to an old lane, ionnyng faste to the north side of the chauntor is orchard or hagard place, and throw an orchard that sumetyme belonged to Thomas Suetirby, Thomas Suetirby.
 and so throw the gardynes till they came to ane hous
 be north the hous that John Artour suntyme dwelled in, and throw that hous into the strete, and so throw the strete southward till they come to William Englysh is hous, and so throw that hous and over the roffe of an other hous, and throw the gardynes till they came to the Combe, and owte at the Combe gate till they came to the Combe.
 Cowe lane, and so forth from that to Carnaalongynethe, that is bei Dolfynesberne. And then they reyturnd bak- Dolphins-Kilmain- Du[b]lyn to Kilmaynnan; and so downe till they came to

 ham. the Bowbrige, and throw an arche of the same brige, Bowbrige. and so throw the watyr of Camoke; but for the moste Camoke. ayse they rid on the Pryour of Crychurches lands till Christ they came in to an acre of Gargets medues, and left that Church. acre be south them. And then they ridd over the watir of Camoke westwarde, for to that place came the watyr of Camoke. Amplyffy in olde tyme, and so forth westward, levyng the Liffey. tillyng land of Kilmaynnan on the lyfte hand and part Kilmain- of the medue on the right hand, till they kame to the ham. Meadow. narrowest place of the medue; and their lyeth by the tillyng land a dyche of smale thornes and breres. And then they ridd northward in and throw the watir of Amplyffy to the west end of Elyn Hor is medue, for that is calld the ford of Kylmahenoke, for the hyll that is Kylmahe- now called the hill of Isolds fante of old tyme was noke. called Kilmahenoke hyll. And at the fote of that hyll Isold's be north the west ende of Elyn Horrs medue ther is a

LETTER FROM HENRY VIII. TO MAYOR AND CITIZENS OF DUBLIN, 1534.<sup>1</sup>

By the King.

1534. Henry. Trusty and well beloved, we greet you well, and being advertised from our deputy and other of our counsil there how like faithful and true subjects ye do use yourself in the resistance of the malicious enterprizes of that false traytor and rebel, Thomas FfitzGarrauld,<sup>2</sup> and his complices, as we cannot but most entirely rejoyce to perceive thoroughly your faith and loyalty towards us, being indeed things convenient and necessary for such a public weal firmly to adhere unto the same, being the great force and strength of princes, and they consequently the maintainers and conservators of law and justice for the advancement of virtue and the repression and punishment of sin, treason and falshood, so, until time shall so serve that we may have convenient opportunity and occasion in deeds to declare how thankfully we do accept this your proceeding in the declaration of your duty towards us, we have thought good, as well to the intent you should not think us oblivious of your just and loyal dealings hitherto declared, as the rather thereby to encourage and to march you under the banner <sup>1534.</sup> of truth, to endeavour yourselves in such sort to distress and utterly subdue the detestable and false treason of those traitrous rebels there, as they may have shortly their deserved reward, to the example of all others hereafter, by these our letters to give unto you our most hearty thanks, and further to signify unto you that, continuing as ye have commenced, we shall no fail to ingrave in such sort your truth thus showed in our breast, as shall be to the comfort of you all, and the high advancement of the publick weal of that our city hereafter accordingly. Yeven under our signet at our manor of Westminster, the 17th day of November, <sup>West-</sup> in the 26th year of our reign [1534]. <sup>minster,</sup>

<sup>2</sup> The back of fol. 14 is blank. The upper portion has been cut away, but the remnant of the writing on the margin indicates that the entries which it contained were made in the seventeenth century.

<sup>3</sup> Fol. 16 is a piece of parchment of about four inches square.

<sup>4</sup> A second old foliation, extending from 9 to 36, is entered in consecutive figures on the leaves now numbered 38 to 65.

<sup>5</sup> The back of fol. 65 is marked in old figures 178; and the back of 179 is numbered 190 in the same hand.
